Description:

This series introduces new, Oregon-specific introductory sex trafficking curriculum that builds awareness and gives community groups and service providers specific calls to action. The curriculum, titled Understanding and Addressing Sex Trafficking in our Community (UAST) includes stories from trafficking survivors through videos from The Life Story to highlight the risks, vulnerabilities, and impact of sex trafficking. You will customize the curriculum based on your community's efforts, the audience requesting the training, and the delivery method (in-person versus virtual).

The ideal instructors for this curriculum are people who work in a field that intersects with sex trafficking. You will need to have attended, at a minimum, an introductory sex trafficking course to be an instructor for this curriculum.

During this train-the-trainer series, we will...

- Examine how (and why) we created the UAST curriculum
- Discuss considerations for delivering the training
- Prepare you to respond to and correct misinformation from audience members comments and questions while still promoting an environment that is conducive to learning
- Assess our audiences to improve how we market and deliver UAST.
- Deliver one module from UAST.

Methodology:

The series consists of two in-person sessions and one instructor-led virtual session. You will also be doing classwork outside our sessions.

Independent Work:

Independently or with a partner, select one module from the UAST curriculum to practice your facilitation skills. You select the audience and delivery method (in-person or online). We can help you with finding a partner and/or audience members, setting up a Zoom link for you to use, and/or giving technical support for using the tools available in Zoom when delivering the training online. You will find more instructions on our train-the-trainer website.

Estimated time to complete: 60-90 minutes.

Complete by October 12, 2022.

Office Hours:

For support with the independent work, office hours are available on September 27th, October 4th and 11th from 10:00-11:00am via Zoom. You will find more instructions on our train-the-trainer website.
